Between Us

The college students have been putting on the final touches to the sorority and fraternity initiation this past week, and it seems the girls were really getting the worst end of the bargain. Saturday afternoon when the streets were this most crowded three of the girls dressed in red sweaters, white skirts and red ribbons in their hair, were seen washing the windows of the College Pharmacy.

The north wind was whipping the girls as the water ran down from the windows. However, the college swains were sitting very sedately by getting quite a kick out of their efforts. Some girls were painted to look like clowns, and one crowd from out there had to thumb ride back and forth to town for their sisters while they walked. But it's all in the game, and next year you will have it on the girls—Margaret Remington, who has been in Atlanta for the past few months taking a business course, has returned home and is seen very attractively dressed in green sweater, white skirt, and socks matching her sweater, and saddle oxfords. By the way, Margaret is going to work here—Rufus and Dot Knight are moving here from Atlanta and will occupy the Barney Averitt apartment on Zetterow avenue. Their friends are delighted they are to move back here. The Darbys are here for most of the time, too, after retiring their lovely car. They have been the style for the last few weeks since we have had so much cold weather, and Saturday afternoon one young lady was seen in the streets with green and white sweater suit, bright green mittens and ear warmers knitted of the same thread, no sign of cold, either.

Origin of Christian Women's Union

The idea for this organization was conceived in the mind of a nation's wife, Mrs. E. J. Hertwig, of the Presbyterian church. She saw a need for a closer union of the Christian forces of our city. The sudden death of her husband delayed for some time any movement to organize. She called a meeting through the church of the Presbyterian church, inviting a representative from each of the churches in town to consider the advisability of forming an organization. This meeting resulted in a decision to organize for the three-fold purpose of Christian fellowship, spiritual growth and social intercourse. A committee was appointed to draw a constitution and by-laws to govern the organization, which should be just binding enough to hold together without being burdensome. This instrument was drafted by a representative from each church forming the union, Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist, and adopted as read.

Officers were elected consisting of a president, vice-president, secretary and press reporter. No treasurer was provided, for the reason that this was not to be a business organization and no business or work of any kind was to be included.

The name, Christian Woman's Union, the object, three-fold—Christian fellowship, spiritual growth, social intercourse; membership, every Christian woman in Statesboro desiring membership.

The first meeting was held in the Presbyterian church July, 1921. Meetings were held each quarter of the year thereafter, with the W. M. S. of the churches acting as hostesses in rotation.

The union has succeeded in bringing our Christian women together without denominational differences, and has caused us to know each other in a spiritual way which we never would have done without this contact. Friendships and Christian experiences have grown out of our program building which will never be forgotten. Preparation for and effort made to contribute our best to these programs have resulted in hearts uplifted and inspiration given which has brought forth fruitage in past years.

This union has filled its own place in our city, and has caused many a visitor to inquire into its plans and purposes; then go home to emulate its spirit. In this respect it is unique in that there is none like it, unless there be some which have planned on its principles.

The purposes of this union should be maintained and perpetuated by coming generations, and never deteriorate into a mere meeting together. Christian growth and spiritual fellowship should have full sway in program preparation, and these should always inspire and cultivate the members of the union in Kingdom service.

Two possibilities of Christian uplift and spirit-filled lives should be laid upon the minds and hearts of

GEESSE USE BOAT

FOR SPRINGBOARD

When the gunner is away the Canada geese play.

This time, however, it was a fisherman who left his boat docked on the bank on the Colville river in north Georgia and Wildlife Ranger Glenn Bryant, of Dalton, reports that the canoe provided a swimming party for a small flock of gray honkers.

The geese, apparently enjoyed a rest from a long migration flight, in that there is none like it, unless there be some which have planned on its principles.

The purposes of this union should be maintained and perpetuated by coming generations, and never deteriorate into a mere meeting together. Christian growth and spiritual fellowship should have full sway in program preparation, and these should always inspire and cultivate the members of the union in Kingdom service.

Two possibilities of Christian uplift and spirit-filled lives should be laid upon the minds and hearts of

GEORGIA ALUMNI MEET IN GROUPS

Will Observe January 27th In Celebrations of Founding Of University in 1785

Athens, June 13.—More than 40 gatherings of University of Georgia alumni will be held throughout the state on January 27th in celebration of the 155th anniversary of the state legislature's granting the charter establishing the first state university in America.

Local alumni clubs and charter day chairmen in 44 Georgia towns and five out-of-state cities will take charge of the meetings which will take the form of dinners, informal rallies and smokers.

Speakers at the celebrations will be members of the University faculty, prominent alumni, or others interested in the University. All alumni and their wives and husbands are invited to attend the meeting nearest their homes.

In 1785 the legislature set aside 40,000 acres of land to endow the college—America's first state-supported institution of higher learning. The idea of a state university was brought to Georgia by Lyman Hall and Abraham Baldwin, Connecticut-born graduates of Yale University, who subsequently were appointed to the board of trustees and set up the first workings of the University of Georgia.

Bulloch County Trainees Located at Camp Stewart

By RAY TRAPPNELL

Back on regular routine after the recent Yuletide holidays, the officers and men of the 214th Anti-Aircraft Regiment are again busily engaged in their training program.

Under command of General John E. Stoddard, of Washington, Ga., the regiment moved into the training area December 6, following mobilization at their respective home stations on November 25. With a minimum of time devoted to preparation of quarters and to cleaning up the area, the regiment entered into a basic training program for all officers and men.

The training program for the regiment is based upon a training directive from First Army Headquarters, which included:

a. Citizenship duties and unit esprit de corps; b. physical training and conditioning; c. care and use of individual weapons and equipment; d. use of cover, concealment and camouflage; e. scouting and patrolling day and night; f. target and service practice with all weapons; g. thorough training of all specialists in the individual technique of their specialty.

Particular attention has been paid to mess management, and the men are being served well prepared, well-rounded meals. All kitchens are under constant scrutiny of medical officers and are kept spotless in every respect. All kitchens are equipped with double hotel size ranges and two enamel-ice boxes, in addition to ample sink facilities and tables, storage rooms, etc.

The day's work for the soldier begins with reveille at 6 a. m., which is followed by ten minutes of brisk calisthenics. Then he has until 7:30 to eat breakfast, make his bunk, clean his quarters and the area.

From 7:30 until 11:30 the daily training program is followed, and recall from training sounds at this time. At 1 o'clock the men are again formed and resume the training schedule until recall is sounded at 5 o'clock. Then follows supper and freedom from duty until the next morning.

The regimental area, formerly a scrub pine and cypress-covered flat countryside, has been covered with a huge quantity of sawdust, of which there is a plentiful supply available. Walks have been constructed, the ground has been smoothed and raked and a scene of well-ordered neatness now greets the eye.

The soldiers are housed in wood-floored tents, five men to the tent. The tents are 16 feet square and are equipped with a heating stove and electric lights. Showers with an unlimited supply of hot water are provided for each unit.

Reaction of the men to extended federal service is a point of pride to the command, in that a cheerful, willing spirit is predominant, and the so-called "civilian army" has buckled down to real business.

Steps toward the procurement of recreational facilities for the men are under way, and a WPA project is now engaged in the construction of a ball and badminton courts, softball and baseball fields, horseshoe pits, and tennis courts.

These will be completed at an early date and will add much to the pleasure and healthful recreation of the men.

The 214th Regiment is an anti-aircraft unit and is composed of the following: Regimental Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, Washington; Battery "A", Augusta; Battery "B", Monroe; Battery "C", Statesboro; Battery "D", Milledgeville; First Battalion Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, Thomson; Battery

"E", Marietta; Battery "F", Cedar-town; Battery "G", Elberton; Battery "H", Calhoun; Second Battalion Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, Elberton; Medical Detachment, Toccoa; Band, Gainesville.

The average civilian who just hears about Camp Stewart and never really sees it or watches the vigorous training program, thinks very little of the importance of this place, but it is another training camp to safeguard America's rights and uphold American ideals and democracy.

With the present war going on in Europe the American boys here have much to keep their minds off such things, by participating in games such as football, which they play until duty or darkness interferes, while others find it more interesting to listen to the radio.

Captain Johnson, who has been ill in the post hospital, is now rapidly recovering and can be back with us very soon.

Today, Jan. 17, the boys from Battery C made a splendid showing in the parade before Col. Stoddard, and they are determined to make the best showing of any outfit in the 214th C. A. (A.A.).

Sergeant "Doug" Underwood, who was recently connected with our battery, has been transferred to Headquarters Battery and promoted as technical sergeant.

Repealing the Poll Tax

ONE TROUBLE among reformers is that they never know when to stop. Broadly speaking, they seem to proceed upon the assumption that everything that is wrong, and that an absolute state of perfection will never come till everything is changed from its present course of procedure.

Personally we have mighty little patience with this idea of government which holds that democracy can be made perfect by abolishing the poll tax requirement. There may be still other things, but for the moment we cannot recall even one such.

Reformers are pointing out that a large percent of the people of the south are failing to vote in national elections, and are thereby failing to make their own proper contribution to the perfection of society, and that this failure to vote is largely due to the inability of so many persons to pay a $1 poll tax.

Now, we shall not insist that the possession of a dollar or the lack of it shall be the standard upon which to judge one's right to participate in a decision of national affairs.

of the squirrel except his front side, and therefore he did not go "around" the squirrel.

We have felt ashamed of the readiness with which we surrendered. We have always been more or less proud of the fact that nobody could convince us on any subject. To be sure we'll let anybody drive us from one position to another, but nobody can make us completely surrender under any sort of argument.

So when we lay on our pillow after having last week tentatively surrendered, there came to us an impulse to dig further into Webster—to see if he didn't offer us some hope.

And what we found there really saved the day for us; it contradicted the previous definition of "around." That which we quoted last week gave against us the following definition:

"AROUND—On all sides."

The evidence was that the squirrel had maintained a direct front to the man all the while, therefore the man never went around him "on all sides."

The more satisfactory definition, however, and which supports our original prejudice (that is about the proper word), is:

"AROUND—Near; in the neighborhood; as the squirrel was running around the tree. He didn't even have to walk around the tree, as we had previously assumed; all he needed to do was to get in the neighborhood, and that puts him around the squirrel. It was even easier than we had thought."

All of which is conclusive evidence that those who want to believe either way on the question are at perfect liberty to do so. After all, it is not a matter so vital, is it?

We Still Don't Believe It

SOME WEEKS ago this column carried an editorial on the subject of telepathy—more or less vague, perhaps, as to final conclusions, but freighted, as you may remember, with the general theory that there's nothing to it.

Maybe, too, you will remember that in the meandering lines of the editorial there appeared the admission that it is sometimes difficult not to give in to that is, not to admit that telepathy is a reality.

When this writer was a right young fellow and lived more or less active life with other members of a family directed by a progressive father, there came into the family circle a horse which ranked high in the community for his sterling qualities.

He had speed, and he had nobility. It was a sad day in the family when "Butler" answered the final call to greener pastures; and that was more than a half century ago.

He was a sort of personal pal of our's; the memory of him has remained all the intervening years, and he has to us been held as a criterion of the perfect horse.

There may have been others as great as he—perhaps some persons may believe there were horses better for some things; but when we dream at night of horses, it is "Butler" who stands beside us as the acme of perfection.

We have mentioned his name already twice—"Butler."

Last week there came to our desk a copy of a new little publication from an Atlanta suburb in which there was a feature entitled "Bits Gathered Here and There and Fitted Together—By Ben Cooper."

In the course of the article there was some friendly little comment about several of the older editors being called by name. So far as we are aware every name was given correctly until we ran upon this sentence:

"Uncle Dave Butler's Bulloch Times is one of the Southeast Georgia weeklies."

We wonder how Ben Cooper knew about noble old horse friend. If we must be called out of our name, there is no other name we like better than Butler.

SPECIAL TRAINING OFFERED YOUTHS

Conservation Camps Open At Various Points in State on January 27th

Atlanta, Jan. 24.—The Civilian Conservation Corps is specializing in training men for jobs most in demand this year, and the next group will be enrolled in the CCC on January 27th. It was announced this week by Dr. Joseph M. Branch, director of the state department of public welfare.

Dr. Branch pointed out that persons desiring to enroll in the CCC should file their applications with their respective county welfare departments. He added that no application would be accepted after January 27th.

H. B. Merriam, in charge of CCC selection in Georgia, declared that the program is to offer training jobs for work that will give men ready work in the national defense program. He emphasized, however, that the Civilian Conservation Corps program has no actual military training.

"The jobs we are training our men to do are not along military lines, but for work that will prove highly remunerative in private employment during the national program," he said.

The CCC is offering training in mechanics, radio operation, surveying, telephone line work, building trades, Mr. Merriam declared.

He added that Georgia's CCC camps are being beautified and made more comfortable for this year's consignment of men. The CCC director generally speaking, is for employing men between the ages of 17 and 23 years, unmarried and not in school, a citizen of the United States and a person of good character.

Although they must be unemployed at the time way on the question are at perfect liberty to do so. After all, it is not a matter so vital, is it?

Between Us

Final plans have been made for the President's Ball, and when the hour comes for the hundreds of guests to begin over the nation, our town will not fall behind in doing their bit for this worthy cause. With Jim Coleman at the head of the committee we are assured of a very entertaining evening.

—Crock Smith is a person you can't get by. He and Marion are very proud of their fourth daughter, which was named after her mother, Mrs. Coleman. They will be having out too many bouquets about the daughter, he turned the tables on the club and read an original poem on the wonderful it is to have four daughters. An attractive group of girls these Smiths—Eight now—gardeners are busy ordering new rose bushes and getting quite a thrill over their ill seed popping up in spite of this cold.

—Social events will be a thingy way of working around and finally holding the upper hand over hearts. Several weeks ago a very pretty young miss out Savannah avenue way decided she had gone with a certain young man as long as she cared to. So when he called for the usual date she very politely said she had a date—which he could not believe. After sitting around the house trying to get the evening, time began to drag, so she set off to go to the show. He, too, had to wait quite long, so he went to the same theatre. She, too, did not sit where they always sat, but on the opposite side of the show. But, she neither would he. The last saw of the couple he was going Savannah avenue way, and it's a long story.
